A. 2. Information made available to stakeholders

In many developing countries cooking is done by using thermally inefficient cookstoves consuming lots of fuels, especially non-renewable firewood and charcoal.¹

Fuel Scarcity and Environmental Damage: High demand for non renewable biomass, driven by population growth, strips away forest cover and damages the land. The subsequent deforestation releases greenhouse gasses that worsens climate change.

Health Concerns and Time Drain: Traditional cooking methods using unclean fuels expose people to harmful smoke and unsafe drinking water

The PoA is promoted and developed by OYU-Green Private Limited, who shall collaborate with various local partners to implement the activities within the country included in the programme area (Nigeria).

Contribution to Sustainable Development

Depending on the specific technology(ies) to be implemented by each activity under this PoA, the contribution on sustainable development may include:

- SDG 3 (Good Health and Well-being): Many improved cookstoves are associated with reduced smoke, which can lessen exposure to dangerous indoor air pollution and thereby may increase the respiratory health of the end-users.
- SDG 5 (Gender Equality): Traditional cooking methods often require women and girls to spend a significant amount of time collecting fuel. Improved cookstoves are often more fuel-efficient, reducing the time needed for fuel collection. This frees up time for women and girls to pursue education, income-generating activities, or leisure.
- SDG 8 (Decent Work and Economic Growth): New working opportunities created through recruitment of locals for project related activities like e.g. stove distribution, maintenance or monitoring activities.
